"Face in the Gale"

The experienced sailor knows that a vessel must head into a storm to avoid a shipwreck. He must keep the ship facing into the gale. It takes courage to head seemingly into further trouble, but it is only by facing difficulties that they can be conquered. There are some things that can not be avoided and which, if not resisted, will overcome and overwhelm us. The difficulty with trying to run away from an adversary is that an adversary, like the wind, runs faster, soon catches up and overcomes all in its wake. The wise man never turns his back on trouble, he faces it, and in so doing becomes a victor instead of a victim.

From Quiet Thoughts by Paul S. McElroy.
